Dan McCready Has Always Put Country First

By now you've heard about my son Dan's priorities. His values. His accomplishments. But as someone who's known him longer than anyone else, I want to tell you about the man—the son, the patriot, the job-creator, the father, the leader—that Dan McCready is.

After terrorists attacked us on 9/11, Dan felt called to serve. He could have chosen an easier path after college, but he joined the Marines to fight for our freedoms in Iraq. Dan's dad and I feared for his life. But we knew how much Dan loved his country, so we gave him our blessing.

On Dan's way to training, he sent me this letter. Of course, Dan made us prouder than we could have dreamed, leading 65 Marines in Iraq and finding his faith in God. Then in 2018, Dan again felt called to serve—in Congress. He wanted to fight for affordable healthcare, better public schools, and good-paying jobs like the ones he's created as a small-business owner.

For more than two years, I've watched Dan fight for the chance to serve you. If you give him that honor, I know he will put country over party—and reach across the aisle to get things done.

Dear Mom,

Tomorrow I leave for Officer Candidate School and take the first steps down this new path. I know that military service is not something you and Dad would wish for me at this time of conflict, and I am deeply sorry for the worry my decisions may bring our family. I know that in making this sacrifice myself, I am asking you to sacrifice just as much.

I want you to know how grateful I am for giving me your blessing and understanding that I must follow my heart. I hope it may be some comfort for you that I cannot remember feeling more strongly about anything than I do about serving my country as a United States Marine. We were so fortunate to be born into this great country and I will be honored to do my part in giving something back.

Love,
Dan
