Maggie Goodlander
Will Fight for Our Reproductive Freedom With Everything She's Got

When Maggie Goodlander was 20 weeks pregnant, her baby was diagnosed with a fatal condition and died in her womb. She needed a two-day procedure to remove him.

But since Trump's Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade, doctors in the Northeast are flooded with patients from states where abortion is banned.

Maggie would have to wait two weeks to get the procedure.

But her surgery date came too late. She went into labor and had to deliver the baby by herself.

For Maggie, the consequences of Trump's Supreme Court's decision to deny women essential health care services are very real.

Maggie is running for Congress to make sure every woman gets the essential health care she needs and deserves.
